John Hampden and Algernon Sydney were the ideals for most of the Virginia leaders in the American Revolution.

John Hampden

First cousin to Oliver Cromwell, educated at Oxford, able English lawyer, foremost parliamentary leader in opposing the oppressions of Charles I, chief figure in the Ship Money Case, mortally wounded at Chalgrove Field in the English Civil War, a martyr in the cause of liberty, one of England's greatest statesmen.

Hence it was eminently appropriate and fitting when Hampden-Sydney College was founded in 1775 to use the names of these leaders in the English Revolution.

Algernon Sydney

Grand-nephew of Philip Sydney, second son of the Earl of Leicester, lieutenant-general of cavalry in Cromwell's army, one of England's greatest political theorists, unjustly accused in the Rye House Plot and executed for treason in the reign of Charles II, a martyr in the cause of liberty.

The FOREWORD

In the production of this book it has been our purpose to make a lasting contribution to Hampden-Sydney College and to the pleasure of its students.

The 1932 KALEIDOSCOPE has no theme other than Hampden-Sydney. Its division pages portray in part the progress which the College has made in more than a century and a half of service to the nation. The history and traditions of this progress are almost unrivalled in educational annals.

There came a fitting climax to this history a year or more ago when it was found that Hampden-Sydney has a larger percentage of living graduates listed in Who's Who than any other American college or university. Widespread recognition and praise has since come to the college. To that we could add little at best. But to the alumni who have thus helped to make the Hampden-Sydney of today we have devised a small but unique tribute for our senior pages, in the hope that the students of the present may in turn do honor to the "small college great."

When our twilight years have come, may we sit down with our reminiscences and mentally trip once more the light fantastic of the youthful camaraderies which we enjoyed during our comfortable interlude at Hampden-Sydney.

ADMINISTRATION

The Alamo

THE rear or western portion of this building, erected in 1817 during the last years of the administration of Dr. Moses Hoge, is the oldest building on the Hill. It was the birthplace of his grandson, Dr. Moses D. Hoge, first honor graduate of the class of 1839, the great orator, "The Chaplain of the Confederacy," and for many years a member of the Board of Trustees.

The front or eastern portion of the building was added two or three years after the building of the eastern end of Cushing Hall in 1822 or 1823. For many years thereafter it housed a small preparatory school known as the Hampden-Sydney Academy, and for another long period it served as a boarding house. It has been used during the last decade as a residence for bachelor and "newly-wed" professors.

Due to this variety of uses to which it has been put over a span of more than a hundred years, this building has had quite a number of names. It has been familiarly called at different times "Steward's Hall," "The Commons Hall," "Hampden-Sydney Academy," "Mess Hall," and "Students' Club." The name "Alamo" is of comparatively recent origin, having arisen from the supposed resemblance of its architecture to that of the younger and more famous Alamo in Texas.

THE CLASSES

The President's Home

"PENSHURST," the present home of the President of the College, was erected in May, 1830, through the efforts of Dr. John Holt Rice, the founder of Union Theological Seminary. The money was contributed by Presbyterian friends in North Carolina; hence, the building was known for many years as "The North Carolina House." For sixty years, ending with the removal of the Seminary to Richmond, it was occupied successively by Doctors Francis S. Sampson, Samuel L. Graham, and Benjamin M. Smith of the Seminary faculty.

Through the liberality of Major Richard M. Venable of Baltimore, Maryland, this property came into the possession of the College in the late nineties, along with the other Seminary property south of Via Sacra. Thereupon, the building, given the name of "Penshurst" in perpetuation of the name of Algernon Sydney's birthplace and home in Kent, became the President's home, and Dr. Richard McIlwaine, the efficient President of that time, moved into it immediately. The previous quarters of the President had been for some years in what is now the Students' Christian Association building, to which the H. Tucker Graham Gymnasium has since been appended. Thus for about thirty years, "Penshurst" has been the dwelling-place of those upon whose shoulders the burden of the guidance of the College's affairs has rested heaviest and to whom praise for her progress should first be given.

George, the distinguished head of the "Pig-Latin" department, is most typically seen in winter months sitting in the spacious windows of the Shop, and in warmer weather there comes never an afternoon when our shaggy-headed friend from Lynchburg is not stretched out full length under one of the huge oaks in front of the Club. Among his classmates an unforgettable incident was his complaint four years ago to Coach "Ching" Graham at the cumbersome burden of having to lug a pair of football shoes around the gridiron on his winged and unaccustomed feet. And who is there who has not been thrilled by his lightning-sprints down the straightway?
We know that George's future paths will be characterized by success. Why? Because he has a "heart for any fate."

A long, blond, six-foot piece of affability, Bruce has an ever-ready wit which has been a greatly appreciated antidote for the gloom which wouldst fain upon us at critical times.

Bruce has an exceptional ability to make valid, brutally frank observations on contemporary ideas, institutions, and people. But either through tact or consideration for local vanity, these impressions are carefully kept from the "dear, dear public," and Bruce goes on his way with a rarely suspected worldly wisdom, hiding all under a mask of sophistication.

This polished gentleman-about-town has charmed us with his whole-hearted friendliness, and it is with a tinge of sadness that we wish the best of luck to a real friend.

One of our most vivid recollections twenty years from now will be the picture of the two Crawleys, Kenner leading by fifty feet, traversing the vale from "The Maples" to the gym every afternoon about four.

Sheild says little, thinks much, and plugs on. Easy-going and unassuming, he takes things just as they come to him. He inspires an admiration as quiet and unpretentious as he himself is.

Sheild hasn't won a great name for himself in athletics, but he is in many respects an ideal athlete—studious of every method of improvement, combining a cooperative spirit with a natural love for physical attainments; both coaches and fellow-students are glad to have him on any squad. His greatest proficiency was attained in track, of which "hard luck," forcing an absence from school last year, robbed him of a captainship.

There can be no doubt that success awaits one with so zealous a determination and so ardent a spirit.

A year and a half ago Tony came to us in mid-season as a junior from Penn State. After his experience in a large Northern school, Hampden-Sydney seemed to be a novelty to him, but he liked it not a little. It was no time at all until his interesting personality had won for him a definite place among the band of loyal Tigers.

The short term of Tony's stay here, unfortunately, pretty well precluded the possibility of his taking much part in the organized campus activities. But he is by no means unacquainted in the pleasant purlieus of Farmville's fair inconstants.

Tony intends to be an M.D. one of these days. If he develops as much skill in readjusting deranged human mechanisms as he has shown in allaying the multifarious ills of the recalcitrant red puddle-jumper which balks at the name of "Bessie," then he will certainly attain all the success which we so heartily wish him.

In Charlie we have a restlessly energetic personage, the avowed peer of the business managers of campus activities. We might almost expect him to turn professional. In many ways he has shown his ability to direct the work of others and to accomplish much himself. He possesses a rare ability to carry things through unfailingly to their completion. Charlie has added an endearing spice to his work—a "bull-artistry" which has marked him as a most picturesque and potent "slinger" of the good old "hooey."

Hampden-Sydney never had a more loyal or more honorable son than Fred. We don't know who it was who defined a gentleman as "one who never intentionally hurts another," but we are certain that he must have had Fred in mind at the time. He is unselfish beyond any degree we have observed in even the most generous people. It is often said that he would give you his best Sunday shirt and apologize for not having two.

If you should happen to find Fred in low spirits, just tell him of a prospective dance anywhere within reach during the next month or two, and he'll beam all over like a kid in a ten-cent store.

During the past four years, John has shown himself to be a real "live wire". He has participated in almost every phase of student activity and has never failed to appear to advantage in everything he attempted. He has never seemed the least bit busy or worried; characteristically, he accepts things as he finds them. Talented, shrewd, and always ready to help wherever there is need, he is a handy man to have around.

John inevitably engenders a unique respect toward himself in the minds of all who know him; he is probably the best-liked man on the campus. Sincerity and unselfishness may typically be found in his every act, and a distinctive sense of humor rounds out this irresistible personality.

"The" has one of the most attractive personalities in college. You cannot help liking and admiring him, with his pleasant disposition and happy laugh. Never does he seem worried or in a bad humor, for he takes things as they come and never complains. As a student he relies on his natural resourcefulness coupled with some hard study, and it is very seldom that he fails to make the grade. When he came to us four years ago, he was received quietly and was generally liked from the first. He has exhibited those qualities that go to make a dependable, unassuming character and the marks of a true man. His characteristics are those of a true friend and of a courteous gentleman.

Harper may not be overflowing with the stuff of which genii are made, but he is a hard worker, a merciless taskmaster to himself when conditions demand the expenditure of energy.

It is comforting sometimes to find in the midst of our thought, our skepticism, and our turmoil, a man such as Bryant—one whose life is an open book, with no regrets, and with a naively simple philosophy.

The neighboring S. T. C. is his favorite place for "socializing". Numerous have been the nights that its sublime portal has received his cheery presence.

The fact that Harper has seldom made an enemy should stand him in good stead in the profession of law.

Bob does everything with a characteristic earnestness. He is truly a hard worker; and this, with his ability, determination, and consistency, gives an unbeatable combination. Besides, Bob possesses a great store of dry wit and a sense of humor that endures throughout all his troubles. McClintic is naturally of a scientific turn of mind. With him it is never enough to learn that certain phenomena take place within the limits of time and space. To content this inquisitive mind, you must inform him of the circumstances which were the causative agents effecting the phenomena. This desire to "get at the bottom of things" follows Bill outside Bagby Hall; it is evidenced in everything he does.

In Billy Powell, the Class of '32 has its wit and its clown. If Billy had been King Cole's court fool the three fiddlers would not now be immortalized in the child-rhyme —they would not have been needed at all, and the final line of the popular verse would read, "And he called for his jester, Powell." Billy has also been the recognized leader of the "radical" faction of the class. Many are the class and student body meetings which this forceful politician has dominated and seldom have his aims been thwarted.

Billy did one of the best jobs as captain of football that has been turned in within the years of our remembrance. What a pity that his team could not have beaten Richmond! Had that been true, the Class of '32 would have yet to see its first football defeat at Spider hands!

Elmer has shown us his courage and will by making the football team in spite of the handicap his size gave him. He never played before coming to Hampden-Sydney, but did not let that worry him; he kept plugging just the same. He is also a fine track man, making his letter last year in the two-mile event.

Membership in Chi Beta Phi reflects Elmer's inherent preference for things scientific; and it is in Bagby Hall that he has done his best scholastic work. Lee's career at Hampden-Sydney, from the very beginning, has been checkered and sensational. Always at odds with the Dean's office, he has never laid any claim to a creditable scholastic record. Yet occasional subjects, notably math, have caught his interest, and it is no surprise to those who know of his high scores on Dr. Allen's intelligence tests to learn that his reports have been ornamented with a sprinkling of "first grades". It is characteristic of Lee to furnish surprises; yet to those who know him best, nothing he could do would be a surprise.

Lee has an independence of character; an interesting streak of irresponsibility; and a mechanical bent which is attested by his numerous automobiles, motorcycles, and radios. He is to be remembered for his sterling qualities as a friend as well as for his accomplishments as a student. Rarely has it been our good fortune to find among men one in whom the qualities of proficiency and affability are so harmoniously blended. Everyone admires a man who will put his very heart into an undertaking, once he has tackled it. That's one reason why we have liked Charles.

Could any dance at Hampden-Sydney or in Farmville be complete without "Tazewell"? Most emphatically, "No!" For we have grown so used to his presence at every "shag" that he is never asked "Going to the hop tonight, George?" And yet his presence is never taken for granted; his personality just doesn't admit of it. The Beau Brummel of his class, his taste in matters social is exceptional.

And yet, there is more to George than the "social hound". He typifies in some respects the best of culture and refinements; he has an artistic appreciation of real value; he is charitable toward all, characteristically comfortable and nonchalant. Wherever joviality reigns supreme, there you may find George.

A small but stalwart product of the Greenbrier Valley, a true and sincere friend at all times, ready to work with you or laugh with you as the case may be, always considerate of others—this is the impression which Lee has made upon his associates of the last four years.

Lee is one of these thorough people who has an unaccountable appetite for tough courses. And the fact that he has handled the toughest of them creditably is a tribute to his ability as a student. However, this tendency toward things scholarly is not so all-engrossing as to exclude social functions on High Street. Lee is not the least among Hampden-Sydney's admirers of the ladies.

When we hear of Lee's almost inevitable success in the field of medicine we will think, "Now there's a man I am proud to have known."

ACTIVITIES

College Church

THE building now used by College Presbyterian Church is the third structure on the Hill used for religious services. First, there was a frame building a few yards north of the present location. This early building was supplanted about 1819 to 1821 by a small brick church, facing south. Under the co-pastorate in the fifties of Doctors R. L. Dabney and B. M. Smith of the Seminary faculty, its accomodations proved inadequate, as there was a steady increase in the attendance of both white and colored people. A committee suggested as a solution the exclusion of the negroes, but the congregation agreed that the thing to do was to erect a larger building. The plans were drawn up and the construction in 1859-1860 was supervised by Dr. Robert L. Dabney—scholar, soldier, preacher, theologian. Money for the pews was secured after the Civil War through the efforts of the ladies of the congregation.

The plans which Dr. Dabney prepared were used also in the building of the Tinkling Springs Presbyterian Church, Fishersville, Augusta County, Virginia, which is the only other church building of this type in the world.

So fine are the proportions and structural harmony of College Church that experts have repeatedly pronounced it an artistically perfect example of Colonial church architecture. In its simple lines and stalwart structure College Church is symbolic of the staunch faith of the founders and preservers of the College.

That intercollegiate debating is one of the leading activities on the Hampden-Sydney campus is shown by the fact that the Tiger debaters have won almost seventy per cent of their forensic contests in the last six years. Last spring they won eight out of thirteen debates, including victories over Emory University, West Virginia University, Agnes Scott College, and a radio debate with Roanoke over station WDBJ. This year every effort is being bent to measure up to this record, despite heavy loss by graduation last June. The debate squad numbers ten men and has to its credit at the time of writing two wins over Randolph-Macon Woman's College and one loss to Bridgewater on the question of Dominion Status for India. A radio debate over WDBJ is scheduled with Roanoke College for March 10 on Uniform Marriage and Divorce Laws. Following this will be debates with the University of Richmond, Randolph-Macon College, Lynchburg College, Emory and Henry College, Agnes Scott College, Emory University, and other institutions.

FRATERNITIES

The Library

THE present Library building was erected in 1881 for Union Theological Seminary. The money for its construction was obtained through the efforts of Dr. Benjamin M. Smith, a first honor graduate of Hampden-Sydney College, class of 1829. Dr. Smith was the professor of Oriental Languages and Literature and the Librarian of the Seminary as well as its savior on a number of occasions. More than once an untimely death for that institution was prevented only by his loyal energy in getting out and raising the money necessary to its continued operation.

The Library was one of the Seminary buildings which were included in the gift of Major R. M. Venable to the College in 1898. Prior to its acquisition Hampden-Sydney students used the books of three libraries. Each of the literary society halls was lined with high shelves containing many volumes. The entire top floor of the central portion of Cushing Hall was devoted to these two groups, the Union Literary Society occupying the northern half and the Philanthropic Literary Society the southern half of the floor. The college library was located in a room just beneath the literary society halls. It had been of negligible consequence prior to the early twenties when about five hundred volumes were obtained from the defunct Library Company of Prince Edward County. The books from the three collections were united, through the societies' generosity, and removed to the present building soon after it was donated.

During the last thirty years the Library has been made increasingly available for student use. It contains approximately twenty-five thousand bound volumes and ten thousand pamphlets, including an unusually valuable collection of Virginiana. The tawny bindings and yellowed pages of its books help to create an inspiring atmosphere. The Library is a storehouse of the "life-blood of master spirits"; it is truly "the heart of the campus."

ATHLETICS

Death Valley

THE cherished athletic field of the College is a development of the last third of Hampden-Sydney's existence. Previous to the last quarter of the nineteenth century intercollegiate athletics had practically no place in the American educational system. Interclass and other intra-mural competitions prevailed, and each contest excited intense enthusiasm comparable to that accompanying the present-day intercollegiate games. Under this regime the men of Hampden-Sydney and of the Seminary who were interested in physical pursuits retired to a field south of the campus, just beyond the present home of the Venable sisters, and occasional competitions between groups from these two schools were the nearest approach to intercollegiate athletics here prior to 1890. The earliest intercollegiate contest of which there is an authentic record is a baseball game with the University of Virginia in the spring of 1892.

At this time, Death Valley was a "frog pond." In 1895 Major Richard M. Venable, that great benefactor of the College at the time of Dr. McIlwaine's presidency, contributed one thousand dollars toward the draining of the marsh and the construction of an athletic field. With the help of a student "pick-and-shovel gang," the work was completed in the spring of 1896, and the product was christened Venable Field.

So frequent were the defeats which invading teams suffered in this natural amphitheater during the next twenty years that the name "Death Valley" was given in 1915, according to tradition, by a member of a defeated Richmond College baseball team. For thirty-six years Death Valley has been an arena of red-blooded courage, a field of genuine sportsmanship, and a training-ground of real men.

Highlights of Tiger Athletics

1931-1932

At first glance a comparative tabulation of victories and defeats for the sport season of 1931-1932 would not convey the impression of success for Tiger teams at home and abroad, but relative success in percentage of wins and losses is overshadowed by several particular achievements of great interest.

No Tiger who witnessed the basketball game with Randolph-Macon in 1931 will ever forget Willie King's long shot from the center of the floor in the proverbial last minute to play, winning the game by a two-point margin after the two teams had exchanged the lead some eight or ten times. Nor is that score of 19-23 against the University of Virginia in 1932 one to be forgotten readily. The home stand of January 30-February 6 this year was certainly no small success.

Baseball in 1931 commanded unusual interest with such thrills as the defeat of Richmond on our own diamond and as the 5-4 victory over the Indians of William and Mary, the final game of the season. The "discovery" of Louis Humphries, sophomore sensation, as a man equally valuable at both ends of the battery was the "find" of the season, and his inability to return to school this year is a great blow to the Tiger diamond outfit this spring.

Track, king of sports, ruled well in the Spring of '31 when the fleet, limber Tiger athletes showed their supremacy in two out of three home meets. A record broad jump by Lloyd Arehart, 21 feet 1½ inches, was the outstanding individual achievement.

The Tiger netters were, as usual, sweepingly victorious in the Virginia Conference Meet, winning both the singles and doubles championships for the fourth consecutive year, with Finley Talbot starring. In other meets the Tiger tennis team had a more successful record than any other squad.

The football season opened with a thriller in Lexington, with the Tigers holding V. M. I. scoreless until the last few minutes of play, and closed with a thriller in Richmond, in which Richmond gained an advantage when Bradford's touchdown run was called back by the officials on the cessation of motion rule, kicked a field goal from the thirty yard line, and added a touchdown in the final quarter to score a 9 to 0 victory. It was the first time that this year's seniors, the Class of '32, had seen a Spider victory over Hampden-Sydney in the great fall sport of the nation.

FEATURES

Via Sacra

BACK in the nineteenth century this road separated the properties of the College to the north and of the Seminary to the south. It received its interesting name because of its proximity to the Seminary building (now Venable Hall), the supposed abode of holiness. Although the Seminary moved to Richmond more than thirty years ago, the name "Via Sacra" has persisted with remarkable tenacity. The name "Faculty Row" has come into some use in recent years from the fact that some of the professors' residences have long been on it.

The property to the north of Via Sacra was given to the College by Peter Johnston, Sr., at the time of its founding in 1776. The grounds to the south, used by the Seminary after its founding by Dr. John Holt Rice in 1822-1823 were part of the estate of Martin Sailor. This latter property and five of the buildings which stood on it were purchased from the Seminary and presented to the College in 1898 by Major Richard Morton Venable, class of 1854.

The retaining wall of rock between the road and the walkway was built by Dr. Robert L. Dabney, class of 1840. The cement sidewalk was laid in 1908, largely through the efforts of Mr. P. Tulane Atkinson, class of 1907. Its entire length was paved in 1929.

Via Sacra was the ancient dividing line between Union Theological Seminary and Hampden-Sydney College, but it has never been a barrier to the cordial relations of the past and present between the two institutions.

ADVERTISEMENTS

Bagby Hall

BAGBY HALL, the newest of our College buildings, typifies the spirit of the present which will carry Hampden-Sydney in the future far along the steps of progress.

Built in 1922 to accommodate the Departments of Biology, Chemistry, and Physics, it was known for several years as "The Science Hall." Its equipment is the most modern available to a school of limited means. The classrooms and laboratories of the Physics department are located on its first floor, those of the Biology department on the second, with the Chemistry department occupying its top floor. Prior to its construction the Physics classroom and laboratory had been located on the second floor of the central portion of Cushing Hall; the Biology department occupied the southwest room on the second floor of McIlwaine Hall; and the Chemistry department had been housed in the two downstairs classrooms of the same building.

By action of the Board of Trustees in 1930, the name of the building was changed to "Bagby Hall" as a token of its appreciation of the services of Dr. J. H. C. Bagby, a professor of the sciences here since 1892. Thus it stands today as a durable brick-and-mortar monument to the even more durable esteem of one who has enthroned himself, by his sound teaching, in the hearts and minds of hundreds of students.

HAMPDEN-SYDNEY COLLEGE

This institution opened its doors on January 1, 1776, and is the only college in America from which the students entered the Revolutionary War in a body.

Among its charter trustees were James Madison, afterwards President of the United States, and Patrick Henry.

It stands high among the list of "small colleges" which have sent from their halls a remarkable number of leaders and successful men in every profession, in every walk of life. It has always adhered to the standards of high scholarship and gentlemanly conduct. It is definitely Christian in its beliefs and outlook. In its courses of study it meets modern requirements.

The Degrees of Bachelor of Arts and Bachelor of Science are Given
